Locally, it works closely with the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia, the Social Studies Division of the Philadelphia Public Schools, suburban schools, and International House.

In 1979-80 it reached some 33,000 young people and adults. Special projects included teacher-training seminars with the World Affairs Council, and individual tutoring for Indo-Chinese refugee children in West Philadelphia schools. "The World, Ancient and Modern" program, run in cooperation with the Education Department of the University Museum, brought classes to the Museum for a tour of a selected gallery, followed by a talk on what life is like today in the part of the world where the things they have just seen in the gallery were made and used. Grants from the Philadelphia Foundation, Seybert Institutions and Ludwick Foundation made these visits possible for a hundred public school classes last year.
