

DAVID BOWDEN is an environmental education specialist who was educated and has worked in Australia. More recently he has worked with WWF Malaysia and UNESCO in Cambodia. Many of the examples in the article stem from his work in these countries. He has also taught tourism education and is interested in the development of ecotourism. Over the past decade he has traveled extensively, including a stint as a tour guide for an adventure travel company. His photographs have illustrated many articles and books written by him or others. Two recent publications include travel guide books on Thailand and Cambodia.

DAVID A. FEINGOLD is a research anthropologist and filmmaker specializing in Southeast Asia. He conducted long-term field research on opium production, trade, and use among the Akha and Shan peoples of northern Thailand and Burma. He has made ten documentary films in Cambodia for the BBC, Channel 4 (UK), FR-3 (France), WDR (Germany), PBS, ABC, NOVA, and the National Geographic. He has recently completed a three-year research and film project on the ecology of land mines in Cambodia. The film will air on NOVA (PBS) on January 9, 1996.

HEATHER PETERS (Ph.D. in Anthropology, Yale University) specializes in China, with a focus on the ancient and modern societies in China's southwest. She has been associated with The University of Pennsylvania Museum since 1981, and is currently Research Associate in the Asian Section. From 1991 to 1993 she oversaw the completion and inaugural installation of the Arthur Sackler Museum of Art and Archaeology at Peking University. Since 1993 she has been consulting for UNESCO and has conducted museology classes and workshops in Cambodia, Vietnam, and Pakistan.

RICHARD A. ENGELHARDT (right) is UNESCO Regional Advisor for Culture in Asia and the Pacific. He was educated in anthropology, archaeology, and ancient history at Yale and Harvard universities and at the post-graduate Population Institute of the East-West Center at the University of Hawaii. Mr. Engelhardt has worked for the past 25 years on archaeology and heritage conservation projects throughout Asia. Head of the UNESCO Office in Cambodia from 1991 to 1994, he was awarded the title of Commandeur de l'Ordre Royal du Cambodge by HM King Norodom Sihanouk Varman for his work on the preservation of the Angkor monuments.

THIERRY ZÉPHIR received his Diplôme in 1991 from the Ecole du Louvre. Since 1986 he has been chargé d'études at the Musée national des Arts asiatiques—Guimet in Paris and professor at the Ecole du Louvre. A specialist in the art of Southeast Asia, he has also consulted (for UNESCO) and taught at the Université des Beaux Arts in Phnom Penh. His publications cover South and Southeast Asian art from India to Indonesia.

No.	Page		No.	Page
3	31	Angkor: Planning for Sustainable Tourism	1	5	"Native Voices": Hopi Section
3	6	The Angkorean Temple-Mountain: Diversity, Evolution, Permanence	1	25	"Native Voices": Zuni Section
2	53	Behind the Scenes: Illuminating the Past: Art and Artists of the Ban Chiang Project	1	41	"Native Voices": Navajo Section
3	31	Bowden, David	1	65	"Native Voices": Apache Section
3	52	Cambodian History Through Cambodian Museums	3	52	Peters, Heather A.
3	18	Engelhardt, Richard A.	3	43	The Play of the Gods: A Photo-Essay on Khmer Dance Training
3	43	Feingold, David A.	2	26	Reviews and Reports: Re-excavating Cheshmeh Ali
2	14	Feimman, Gary M., and Linda M. Nicholas	2	39	Routes Through the Eastern Desert of Egypt
2	14	Household Craft Specialization and Shell Ornament Manufacture in Ejutla, Mexico	2	3	Shells and Society at Tikal, Guatemala
3	3	Introduction to "Cambodia—Restoration and Revival"	2	39	Sidebotham, Steven E., and Ronald E. Zitterkopf
1	3	Introduction to "Native Voices"	3	18	Two Thousand Years of Engineering Genius on the Angkor Plain
2	26	Matney, Timothy	3	6	Zéphir, Thierry
2	3	Moboly-Nagy, Hattula			