Torre del Mordillo Published

The proton-magnetometer survey by MASCA in 1963 of this fortified hill-top settlement of between the 8th and 3rd centuries B.C. in Calabria, Italy, was followed by excavations that year and in 1966 and 1967. A fully illustrated account of the work and of the finds has now been published by Museum Research Associate and Board Member Oliver C. Colburn in Notizie degli Scavi, 8th series, Vol. 31 (1977), pp. 423-526. Preliminary reports by Dr. Colburn appeared in vol. 9, no. 3 and vol. 18, no. 2 of Expedition.

Southeast Asia Section

The Ban Chiang Project is now entering the final stages of its first five year program; our National Science Foundation Grant (BNS77-14425) for the continued analysis of the artifactual material was renewed through to the end of February 1980. By the end of this summer all artifactual material will have been reconstructed, analyzed, and coded for computerized manipulation and retrieval. Joyce White (who leaves for Ban Chiang in July), and James Penny (just back from two years in Ban Chiang) are supervising a fine laboratory staff of Pennsylvania work-study students and museum volunteers. William Schauffler has been in charge of our SELGEM computer program. Mr. Schauffler, Miss White and Mr. Penny are all completing Penn Ph.D. degrees on Ban Chiang related projects. Deborah

Kramer, a veteran of the Ban Chiang excavations, a Marshall Scholar and Ph.D. candidate at Trinity College, Cambridge University, is currently at the museum conducting her dissertation research on the Ban Chiang ceramic assemblage.

A Ban Chiang travelling exhibit is scheduled to begin a year and a half from now. A conceptual prospectus written by Dr. Gorman has been accepted by the Smithsonian Institution's Travelling Exhibits Service (SITES) which will mount the exhibit and orchestrate its national tour and repatriation to Thailand. Mr. Dejo Savanananda, Director General of the Thai Fine Arts Department, will be visiting the museum this May; he will work with Dr. Gorman and the Smithsonian staff to complete arrangements for the exhibit during his visit.

Our post-graduate training program in Southeast Asian archaeology continues under support from the Ford Foundation and various Southeast Asian governments. Five young Southeast Asian archaeologists including: Pisit Charoenwongsa (Thailand); Otti Mundarjito (Indonesia); Pthomrerk Ketudhat (Thailand); U Nyunt Han (Burma); and Wilfredo Ronquillo (Philippines) are currently enrolled in the program. Four new Southeast Asian students are expected to join us in the fall of this year.

Ancient Cities of the Indus

Dr. Gregory L. Possehl, Assistant Curator in the Southeast Asia Section, has edited and contributed to an anthology, Ancient Cities of the Indus, published by the Carolina Academic Press. Included in the anthology are papers by a number of people associated with the Museum: Dr. Robert Dyson, Dr. Samuel Kramer, Dr. Elizabeth Ralph, Mark Han, Dr. George Dales, Dr. Henry Michael and M. Rafique Mughal. The book will be available soon from the Museum Shop.

Resignation

Mr. Ronald J. Goff, the Secretary of the University Museum, has resigned and will be returning to private enterprise.
